In addition to his work with AJAS, he serves as a Board Member for Lifespan as well as the Alzheimer's Association and is a committee member of the Skilled Nursing Cabinet for Leading Age New York. ★

The 6 Jews You Need to Follow on Instagram

BY JENNY SINGER

Remember most of human history, when gazing at other people in admiration while rooting round through their belongings risked at least, a social interaction, at most, a restraining order? Now, thanks to Instagram, your insecurity can mingle with your morbid curiosity and your fantasies can flirt with your personal aesthetics, all at a party thrown by The Internet.

But where are The Jews in all this? What civilian Jews have Instagram elevated to Internet Celebrity status? Which pre-existing Jewish celebrities have risen above the fray to be anointed Instagram mega-stars? Which celebrity-adjacent Jewish entrepreneur's Instagram is being dogged by desperate Americans begging for healthcare, even though most of his feed is just pictures of sunsets? Who is the best at taking pictures of their own fingernails!?!?

Here are our picks:

Cazzie David

Warning! Do not look at Cazzie David's Instagram (comedian Larry David's 23-year old daughter) unless you have some kind of house cleaning project you want to do with all the bile that will come out of your throat when you see her pictures. Jealousy, thine name is pictures of a woman with apparently unlimited access to drinks served in a coconut. With the coolness of an industrial freezer, Cazzie David is the realized version of the beloved male-writer trope, Chill

Cazzie David (Instagram)

Hot Girl. Her Insta is a Hall of Fame of classic C.H.G. activities, not limited to but including:

Posing in a string bikini alongside a rapper-ish captions ('spa time bitche$$'), smoking cigars, loving Barack Obama, rosé, pretending to be alienated by her extremely famous parents, knowing a Kardashian, eating macarons in the bath, and subtle-y implicating herself in the readership of "The New Yorker."
